CRUISE AROUND THE WORLD.

Interesting Letters From Hon. George J. LaBar and Wife.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Feb. 2, 1910.

DEAR FRIENDS:—

Once more, after three and one-half months, we stand on American soil, with our flag waving over us and can hear the good American language spoken, and when you realize that the officers and crew of the ship were Germans, and all others we met were strangers, with an alien tongue, all but our own party, you may know how good it is to be on American soil and hear our own language spoken, when you try to ask questions or do business. It is a pleasure to sit still and write at a table and not have to sit on the edge of a bunk and hold a pad on your knee, with a small light so high up and so dim you can scarcely see. I don't wonder that the editor and myself have allowed so many mistakes to creep into my letters and I hope you can make out what the mistakes were intended to be. I must go back and tell you something about the trip across the Pacific. If you remember I said in my last letter that it was cold and stormy there when we left. We had not far gone before we ran into the storm. All night long the ship was pitching and diving and the water swashing. I thought it must be raining hard and hoped it would keep up until morning so I could see it. Well it did and I had no need to worry about it's not lasting for it lasted eight days, and then it eased off a little for the next two days, when we reached the port at Honolulu. After I had breakfast I went up on deck, and while it was not dangerous or bad, it certainly was a fine sight. The old ship would ride along for a minute or so and lift her nose high out of the water and then go down with a splash. About that time a wave would strike her on the side and go splashing clear over her bows, drenching the sailors. We were at least thirty feet higher and it did not bother us much, but now and then one would reach us and send us hurrying out of the way. The side promenade deck was enclosed with canvass, over forty feet above the water line. Mr. Matteson thought he would go to one of the openings and take a peep, when just then a good big wave came aboard to see for itself what was going on and they met and Mr. Matteson went below to change his clothes. To me and several others it certainly was a fine sight. I would stand for hours and watch the sport. A great many remained below for several days, and aside from the monotony of seeing nothing but water for ten days, it was a fine trip. When we reached Honolulu, they said we had been in the track of a typhoon. I mentioned in my last letter about crossing the 180 degree and having two Wednesdays. Now I have a conundrum for the younger people: Now on this trip I have put in or lived one day more than you have; had one more regulur breakfast, dinner and supper, than you have had, spent one night more and did not live one minute longer than you did. Can you figure it out? It certainly was strange to spend Wednesday, get up next morning and still be Wednesday all day again. We arrived at Honolulu about 9:30 a. m., on the 23rd and we immediately went ashore. We were met at the wharf by girls with large quantities of flowers and each one of the passengers were bedecked with wreaths until we looked like a walking flower garden. We were each given a large stick pin, or badge, with the word "Aleha," meaning welcome, on it. We found street cars in waiting for us, which we immediately boarded for the usual ride about the town. We found the city, very nice with flowers everywhere, even the hedges covered with them. We visited the aquarium and of all the aquariums I ever saw all around the world, and in our own country, this beats them all. The most beautiful in color and queerest in shape. No rainbow ever had prettier colors than the fishes of Honolulu and to prove that I did not have any jimjams when I looked at them I bought a book to bring home with me to show you. We took lunch at a fine hotel on shore and then next day hired an auto and took a ride out in the country and up to the highest point in the Island on which a road runs. Years ago a tribe from a neighboring Island came in canoes and landed and conpuered the place and drove the natives, 3,500 strong, to the top of this high cliff and threw them over to their death, and remained the rulers until the whites took possession of them. When we reached the top, we got out of the autos to walk over to the edge of the cliff and take a look. It was almost impossible to walk on account of the wind and some could not walk. Such a wind I never faced and our man said it was not blowing much either. But there was plenty for me and we soon got out of that and back to town to see the water races, gotten up for our benefit. Among the other things we saw the native making a native bread or mush, that used to be their main food, but new seldom used. We were back to the ship at five p. m., and away for San Francisco, which we reached on Monday the 31st., without incident, on a very smooth sea. We landed about noon and got our luggage in a pile for the inspection officer and had our stuff examined very briefly, without any trouble and then struck out for a hotel and something to eat, in the grand old home land. Now we will close this letter with some verses we got on the boats that appealed to us:

Oh! its home again, and home again, America for me,
My heart is turning again to God's country;
To the land of youth and freedom, beyond the ocean bars,
Where the air is full of sunshine and the flag is full of stars.

It's good to see the old world and travel up and down,
Among the famous countries and cities of renown;
To admire the lordly castles and the monarchs and the kings,
But soon or late we have had enough of antiquated things.

The old world is a fine place, yet something seems to lack,
The past is too much with her and the future looking back;
But life is in the present and the future must be free,
We love our land for what she is, and what she is to be.

So it's home again, and home again. America for me,
My heart is turning home again, to God's country;
To the blessed land of room enough, beyond the ocean's bars,
Where the air is full of sunshine and the flag is full of stars.——

By HENRY VANDYKE, on board the Steamer Cleveland.

Yours Respectfully,
MR. and MRS. GEO. J. LABAR.

Forty-Fifth Mile Stone.

Mr. Parker Jackson, well known to every man, woman and child in Emporium, celebrated his forty-fifth birthday on Tuesday. P. J., as he is familiarly called, has been in the employ at the Warner house for twenty-two years and is well and favorably known to every traveling man on the road. He is generous to a fault and here's hoping the P. J., will live to enjoy many happy returns of the day. He is a good honest chap and every one has a good word for him.

P. O. S. Of A.

Members of the Patriotic Order Sons of America will attend divine services in a body, next Sunday evening, in the Methodist Episcopal Church. The pastor, Rev. J. F Anderson, will take for the subject of his discourse, "Washington, the Patriot." A full attendance of the local Order is expected. All others cordially invited to the sevice.

Surprise Wedding.

The many friends of Mr. Paul Klinger and Miss Myrtle Flemming were surprised Saturday evening a 9 o'clock at the home of Mr. Pearson J. Fry, Mrs. Fry being a sister of Mrs. Klinger. The event proved to be the more complete surprise because of the known intentions of the bride to start east this week to Emporium, Pennsylvania, where she had intended to take up a good position as stenographer in one of the large business offices in that place. The little God Hymen, however, succeeded in getting the better of argument, and the young people concluded to cast their earthly lots together.

The cermony was performed by Rev. Charles Dickey of the Methodist Episcopal church, only a few intimate friends being present.

Miss Flemming, now Mrs. Paul Klinger, has been a resident of Raton for the past two years, living with her sister, Mr. Pearson J. Fry, at her home on Cook Avenue. Miss Flemming was at one time the book-keeper for the firm of Williams & Rising and during the past winter has been assisting Miss Alice Vaught in the Kandy Kitchen

Mr. Klinger is equally well known in Raton, being now employed in the Rocky Mt. Auditor's office. As soon as a suitable location is secured, Mr. and Mrs. Klinger will be at home to the many friends who are wishing them the happiest journey upon the sea of matrimony.

High School Basket Ball.

On Saturday evening, Februrary 19, the DuBois High School Basket Ball team will toss up with the local High School team at the Opera House. DuBois holds the championship of Western Pennsylvania and has a clean record. Emporium High School team, as we all know, is a strong aggregation, and is fast coming to the front. This should be a good game and well worth the time to attend it. Let everyone turn out and assist the High School boys. See the large posters announcing the game, that were printed in our jobbing department, where we are fully prepared to handle all kinds of job work.

The Misses Hertig Entertain.

Last Thursday evening the Misses Verena, Alma and Hilda Hertig entertained the Union Friendly Society. After a short business meeting, the remainder of the evening was turned over for a general good time, and all present proceeded to make themseves at home and enjoy, to the fullest extent, the hospitality of these popular young ladies. Several contests were the chief amusements and prizes were awarded to the successful constestants. Delicious refreshments were served, The next meeting of the society will be held at the home of the Misses Metzger on Fifth street, on Thursday evening, March 17th.

Washington's Birthday Celebration

Washinton Camp, No. 382, P. O. S of A, are making extensive plans to celebrate Washington's Birthday. Next Sunday evening, the members of the Camp will meet at the Camp rooms at seven o'clock and will then proceed to the M. E. Church, to attend services and Rev. Brother J. F. Anderson will preach the anniversary sermon. On Tuesday evening, Feb. 22d, the Camp rooms will be open at seven-thirty o'clock and after a short program the Camp will partake of a banquet served at The Warner.

Special Pension Bill.

Through the efforts of Congresman Chas. F. Barclay, a special bill has been passed through Congress giving David F. Marsh, of Mason Hill, this county, a pension of $30.00 per month. President Taft has affixed his signature to the bill. This measure has been hanging fire since last session of Congress, yet Congressman Barclay, with his usual zeal, left not a stone unturned to secure this well deserved assistance for our friend. To say his family and friends are delighted is putting it mildly and are loud in their praise of our efficient Representative. Certainly the old soldiers and their widows, are fortunate in having a comrade represent the Congressional district and one who deems it not a hardship to go out of his way to look after their interests.

"The Girl From the U. S. A."

In a late review of theatrical productions by a prominent dramatic critic, the play "The Girl from the U. S. A." received a full measure of praise.

The story deals with an American girl who has been placed in an aristocratic convent in Paris, France, that her education might receive an ultra "Finish." There she has formed a deep and lasting friendship with Vivienne de Voltone, a French girl.

The play opens with a deep intrigue, both social and political, on the part of the Turkish Ambassador to France. The girl follows her abducted friend into the innermost recesses of the sacredly guarded harem of a Turkish pasha, and in the guise of a new "Favorite" is terrorized to find that the very Turk whose scheme she is trying to frustrate, has fallen in love with her. Only by shrewd diplamacy can she save herself from the clutches of an unlicensed barbarian. And later in the ceremonious mazes of Chinese society, her native wit saves the day for herself and friends.

Although the plot leads one among scenes of oriental splendor, the tone of the play remains vividly and thoroughly American in sentiment. The climaxes are thrilling and unexpected, and the comedy of several novel characters is as welcome as it is diverting. There are some splendid musical numbers added to an already complete entertainment, and altogether the Girl from the U. S. A., is somebody you will want to be acquainted with when she appears at the Emporium Opera House on Monday evening, Feb. 21st.

That's What all Say.

Our friends, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Byrnes, of Lancaster, Pa., evidently appreciate the PRESS, having recently written us enclosing a check for our paper well into 1911, at the same time saying, "we certainly could not keep house without it.".

One of Uncle Sam's Boys.

Lieutenant Frank McNarney, accomanied by his nephew, Joe McNarney, who expects some day to wear the straps was a pleasant caller last Saturday. Having passed two years in the wilds of the Philippines he is now in the States, for three years, to recuperate, when he returns again. He left on Monday far the post at Des Moines, Iowa. It is certainly interesting to listen to his account of the work in the Philippines. He is a good soldier and had command of a company of Maccabebee Scouts—mostly natives.

Elaborate Banquet.

The Elk County Bar Association will hold their fifth annual banquet at Hotel Bogert, Ridgway, this (Thursday) evening and from all reports it will be an elaborate affair. Judge B. W. Green, of this place, will be a guest and responds to one of the toasts. There will be no question as to the ableness of his remarks, for the Judge is a forcible speaker, one who never talks unless he has something whole some to say.

Attended Funeral.

H. C. Olmsted, of this place, attended the funeral of Mrs. Mary (Cushing) Cody, aged 59 years, which took place at Ulyses, Potter County, last Monday. Her death occured at Washington, D. D., where her husband resides. Mrs. Cody will be remembered by our town's people, having made her home with the Olmsted family during the 70's.

Having Good Time.

W. H. Cramer, who with his family are residing at San Diego, Cal., writes the PRESS under date of Feb. 9th, as follows: We are all having fine time; the weather is just grand. Bright sunshine every day. Will go to Los Angeles next week for several months. Please send the PRESS to Los Angeles, general delivery. We are all well. With best wishes to all.

W. H. CRAMER.

A Rumor.

It is rumored that Thomas H. Brown, who was arrested last week in Buffalo, for bigamy, and who is at present in the County jail at this place, will plead guilty to the charge. With the consent of the Governor of New York State, papers were secured to remove the man from that State to Cameron county.

Remarkable Improvement.

Mrs. W. L. Thomas is gradually improveing, under Dr. Heilman's careful treatment, and it is a mircale that this excellent lady was pulled through, when it is taken into consideration that experts gave no hope of her recovery. She is gaining in strength daily.

Coming Home.

Leon Rex Felt, D. D. S., writes the PRESS he will return to Emporium from Pierson, Florida, where he and his wife have passed the winter, about the 20th of this month. Doctor, better bring your high boots, snow plow and shovels or you will not be able to find us.

Eastern Star.

A Chapter of the Eastern Star, a social branch of Masonry, will be instituted in Emporium in the near future. Wives, daughters and sisters of Master Masons are eligible to membership. Mrs. M. A. Rockwell has the matter in charge.

The Last Spring Election.

The election held last Tuesday was the last to be held. Hereafter the elections will be conducted according to the provisions of the amendments adopted.

Very little excitement took place in this county. Party lines seemed completely obliterated.

Will Rates Come Down.

Messrs. J. J. McCarty, of Philadelphia and A. O. Denzie, of DuBois, are inspecting the fire risks in Emporium for the Underwriters. Emporium, with its excellent fire department, should have a lower rate ef insurance.

Back From The South.

Messrs. W. H. Howard, E. H. Gregory and E. H. Marshall, who have been inspecting land add estimating timber in Virginia for the past month, returned to Emporium on Wednesday.

To reduce stock have cut a big chunk from retail price of fine writing material.

1866.-Volumn Forty - Four.-1910.

With this issue, the PRESS enters upon the 44th year of its existence. During all those years the PRESS has always manfully stood for all that was for the upbuilding of Little Cameron. When the PRESS was established by the late C. B. Gould, in 1866, it was the only newspaper published between Lock Haven and Warren, east and west of us; also being the only paper between Emporium and Olean, on the north, and Brookville south. Our oldest neighbors were the Potter Journal and McKean Miner and Ridgway Advocate, the latter having been revived, after a suspension, by Jerome Powell. Those were trying days for newspapers, yet many of the older citizens were proud of the fact that they had a paper and liberally subscribed for annual subscriptions for their less fortunate neighbors. The Independent was established by S. S. Hacket about the time the present editor of the PRESS entered this office as "devil." Times have wonderfully changed since those days and the style and manner of conducting a country weekly has kept pace with the age of progress and clean journalism, void of mud-slinging, personal abuse and slanderous statements. It has ever been our rule to absolutely refuse space in our paper for aught that would cause the blush of shame. Our beloved predecessor, Cornelius B. Gould, always laid down an iron rule for our guidance, not to publish a line in the PRESS that the subscribers should fear to hand the paper to their children to read.

During our management of the PRESS we shall ever keep the rule and be content to give our readers all the news, clean and wholesome. We want to please all, yet at times that is almost impossible.

"We court criticism." We have adopted this motto and really wish our readers would tell us how to improve our paper. We are here to serve you and desire to give you the best in the larder.

When our Board of Health requested State aid in locating and controlling the out-break of typhoid fever, we were very much impressed with the bigness of the idea of being willing to receive outside advice. So, send it along—we may not use it, or all of it, but we not only want to give our people a good home paper, as we have always labored and not stinted expense to do, but we want to make it the best, as it always has been, and if you will criticise us enough, can hold the goal.

Do you want more politics?
Do you want more religion?
Do you want more abuse?
Do you want more good-cheer and good-will.
Do you? Do you?
Well, let us know.

Politically the PRESS has always been reliably Republican and "points with pride" to its consistency, although at times it seemed almost a hard pill to swallow, yet "principles above men" has always been our motto, even when the victors have gone out of their way to put the knife into us. Those are things that an editor can forgive, but not forget.

We might write pages of stories covering our years in the harness, giving many interesting facts covering "Things as We Saw Them," during our forty-two years of active life in Cameron county. We may do so yet, when the spirit moves us.

But, we have wandered from the subject. The PRESS of to-day is enjoying a large patronage, in fact a larger patronage than at any period in its existence. A rapidly increasing circulation, covering the entire county—many being subscribers to-day who placed their names upon our list in 1866, with its first issue. We aim to give the local news from every town and hamlet in our county and care is taken to secure only reliable correspondents. This department of itself is of inestimable interest to every reader, especially old friends now residing in distant towns and States.

Our printery is now one of the most complete in this section, having an abundance of the very latest faces in types, borders, rules and machinery; the very best workmen and a large line of papers for every line of work. In connection with our new building, none finer in this section of the country, we are vain enough to say we have one of the best appointed Print Shops to be found in this section of the State. Drop in and see us and judge for yourself. We are proud of it and thank you. We cannot close these rambling remarks without devoutly thanking our kind patrons for their generous patronage bestowed upon us in the past and soliciting a continuance of the same in the future, I remain,

Gratefully yours,
HENRY H. MULLIN.

Don't be Cruel.

The Humane Society of other towns are crusading against owners and drivers leaving their horses standing without blanketing. This cruel habit is common in many towns and our Humane Society are preparing for a similar movement here and numerous arrests will be made, no doubt. Cruel treatment, snow balling horses and similar violations will be rigidly punished. Go ahead and do it right and proper.

MERITS OF THE CITY.

Nearly all civilization is the product of the city, where mind meets mind and each becomes brighter from contact, says New York Weekly. Masses of population may engender great vices, but they also engender great virtues, and if they do not produce, they certainly develop the finest and keenest intelligences that we have. The little town-states of Greece created most of the ancient civilization that is worth having, and after they fell and the dark ages came in it was the little city-republics of Italy that brought light, learning and mercy back to the world. Some of the blackest crimes are committed in the country. Conan Doyle has Sherlock Holmes, in one of his best stories, point out this fact. It was a clever touch and it is true. The country man is not more honest than the city man, although he may lack opportunities. Flaubert and Balzac have drawn grim pictures of sordid meanness in the rural life of France; Tolstoi has done as much for Russia, and Sudermann, Ibsen and Hardy have told similar black stories of their own countries. The recent report of the commission on country life showed considerations which left very much to be desired in the way of improvement.

With food products of all kinds extremely high in price, the people of Long Beach, L. I., may account themselves fortunate in experiencing a visitation of whiting, also known as "frost fish," which were cast upon the beach recently in such numbers that the coast for five miles was a solid ridge of fish. Residents along the beach gathered as much as they could eat immediately and pack away for future use, and then hauled tons of the fish to their gardens and farms to enrich the soil. The whiting is one of the best food fishes of the winter season, and the surfeit at Long Beach would have made many a lover of fish happy if it could have been shared without expense that would have made the distribution profitable.

Quartermaster General Aleshire of the United States army declares in his annual report that he could reduce the cost of maintaining the nation's military establishment if he were given more officers and a new system of selection and detail. There is waste in many directions through the inefficiency of civilian employes and enlisted men who receive extra pay for performing certain duties in an indifferent way. Great savings could undoubtedly be achieved through the inauguration of system and the appointment of capable men, as push for preferment tends to load departments with employes who are chiefly concerned about the drawing of their salaries.

The Washington preacher who finds football in this country worse than bullfighting in Mexico is doubtless sustained by the statistics of mortality in the two sports. The difference lies in the fact that while the bullfighting has become tamer, football has taken on a dangerous strenuosity.

Forty thousand shirt waist makers are on strike in New York. Now, then, if those who have to button 'em down the back will only strike in sympathy, victory is assured.

In spite of the professional knockers the snow really is a beautiful thing, after the walks are swept as far as the street cars.

A New York employe has asked that his salary be cut down. With this exception his friends had not noticed anything the matter with him.

Kermit Roosevelt has killed a sitatunga, but whether it is bigger than an elephant or smaller than a weasel the reader is left to conjecture.

A prominent New York poet is being sued for a grocery bill. What business has a poet eating and drinking, anyway?

WANT JUSTICE DONE

ATTITUDE OF THE PEOPLE TOWARD THE SUGAR TRUST.

Demand Is Not Made in a Spirit of Vengeance But for Its Effect in the Upholding of the Law.

At last one of the high officials of the American Sugar Refining Company—the sugar trust—has been indicted for the monstrous and long-continued swindling of which the federal government was the victim. Charles R. Heike, secretary and treasurer of the company, is important enough and responsible enough to count materially in its inner circles. He is powerful enough to be dangerous to other men of greater authority, if he can be induced to tell all that he knows.

With Heike is indicted Harry Walker, assistant superintendent of the Williamsburg docks of the trust, and James F. Bendernagel, former cashier at the same docks, also Ernest W. Gerbracht, former superintendent there, as well as certain subordinantes who have been indicted before. All of these sugar trust men are charged with conspiracy to defraud the government.

No one who is well informed believes that the top of the corrupt line has been reached. It is altogether probable that men still higher in authority are more guilty than any so far brought within the sweep of the grand jury's net, but if they can be reached at all it will be through such measures as these indictments. It may be that if the government can convict the men it has accused they will decline to bear the punishment for their crimes in silence. They may insist upon bringing down other and more notable personages to share their troubles and go with them to the penitentiary, if need be.

That is what the country desires to see, not so much in a spirit of vengeance as for the sake of checking a dangerously common laxity about dealings with the government, in which the nation, the states and the cities are defrauded. The whole country wants to see full and impartial justice done. It is eager to witness the wholesome spectacle of trust magnates punished exactly as persons of no prominence or wealth would be for like frauds upon the nation's treasury and like contempt for its laws.

So Soon Forgotten.

While Mr. Bryan was celebrating Jackson day by declaiming "The Prince of Peace" at Christobal, in the canal zone (a dispatch from Colon naively says that "he did not mention politics"), the unterrified Democracy of Missouri was gorging on a two dollar dinner in Kansas City.

The Hon. Beauchamp Clark of Pike county emitted ferocious enthusiasm, the Hon. Joseph Wingate Folk virtuous commonplaces; our own organizer of victory, the Hon. Norman Mack, urged the Democrats to get together.

Not a word from Panama; not a word about the chief whom Mr. Mack made president by almost the total electoral vote a fortnight before the election of 1908. The chairman of the national Democratic committee saluted the old familiar favorites, Jefferson and Old Hickory; to the Nebraska Jackson and Jefferson he offered no worship, or but a silent one.

Has Jackson day ceased to be Bryan day? Is Wandering William lost to memory as to sight?—New York Sun.

No Danger of War Over Tariff.

The president of the local government board of Great Britain is reported as deprecating a British tariff on lumber on the ground that it might lead to war with the United States, and as saying that tariffs had caused nearly all the wars that religion had not. We beg leave to assure Mr. Burns that if there is never a war between America and Great Britian until there is one over a British duty on American lumber, peace will be perpetual—as, indeed, we expect it will be, anyway! As for the other part of his statement, if tariffs are to be eschewed because they occasionally provoke wars, of course the natural inference is that religion should also be abolished, since it is the other chief cause of wars! But really we should be much interested to have Mr. Burns display a catalogue of wars which have been caused by tariffs.

The house committee on rivers and harbors has agreed to report in favor of annual appropriations for river improvement hereafter. To keep at work continuously is clearly the best plan to insure real economy as well as positive results.

Mr. Taft and the Consumer.

The president sees in this constantly increasing burden on the consumer the greatest political factor of the time, and believe that it should be studied and analyzed.

Slight Differences.

Contemporaries that declare we are in disagreement with Mr. Bryan do us an injustice. Excepting free raw materials, prohibition, government ownership of railroads, the initiative and referendum, federal charters for corporations, government guaranty of bank deposits, federal ownership of telegraph, government payment of campaign expenses and several other things, we are in entire agreement with Mr. Bryan.—Houston (Tex.) Post.

HIGH PRICES ARE UNIVERSAL

Proof That They Are Universal and Beyond the Reach of Any Government.

In free trade England there is a crisis in the boot and shoe industry because of the sharp advance in the cost of leather. Maunfacturers draw upon many countries for their raw material, obtaining hides from Argentine, Australia and South Africa as well as North America and Europe, but they find themselves unable to buy leather except at so large an advance that it must force higher prices for shoes—so much higher that consumers protest bitterly.

In Vera Cruz, the best known port of Mexico, the cost of living has about doubled, according to unquestioned authorities, in the last ten years or so, and the present retail price of food staples such as flour, meats, tea, potatoes, etc., is so high that the condition of the poor is desperately bad. All that they can hope to do is to sustain life by eating only beans and corn meal and the cheapest and poorest vegetables.

Even in Siberia, one of the regions least populated and most opulent in natural resources, there is a marked rise in values, all the way from land to meat, and the same change is noted in Argentine, where cattle are raised by millions and the 7,000,000 inhabitants, more or less, have a territory one-third as large as the United States to spread themselves over and use as prodigally as they desire.

Such illustrations of a world-wide movement could be multiplied without limit. They show plainly that some, at least, of the causes of high prices are common to many lands and are probably beyond the reach of any government. Others, however, may be both local and illegal, and in that case they must be dealt with all the more rigorously because of the burdens which cannot be lifted by the power of the state.

For Two New States.

There was no opposition worthy of notice in the house of representatives when the bill admitting Arizona and New Mexico as separate states was passed. If the senate took the wishes of the people as its guide there would be no resistance in that body to the speedy fulfillment of manifest destiny in the case of these two territories—the last remaining in the United States not counting Alaska and the island possessions of the republic.

Both of the territories are much better qualified for statehood than several of the states admitted many years ago. They have enough people, plenty of natural resources and a fair promise of continued and satisfactory growth. It is only a question of years, if not months, when both will be members of the great sisterhood under the Stars and Stripes and there seems to be no good reason for much further delay.

President and Party.

President Taft is president of all the United States and of all the Republican party. He is, beyond most men, kindly, long-suffering and patient. He will make no martyr of anybody. He will penalize no independent views on the tariff. He has such himself. He will not treat as a party crime party independence. He has himself sinned that way and counted it for righteousness.

He will ask only, as an honest president must, candor, fair treatment and an honest desire to help the Republican party to govern and legislate to the good of the whole country. Such men he will support, and he will expect their support on the broad, general principles of the Republican platform, accepting, as he asks for himself, a fair, personal liberty of interpretation. He will read no man out of the party who does not read himself out.—Philadelphia Press.

The President and Trusts.

President Taft, broad-minded, judicially trained, fully equipped and conservative, has proposed a solution which will disturb no values and affect no investmeent. Pass his measures and the railroad and trust question will rest for a generation. Delay or defeat them, and the gathering tide will rise and sweep over all landmarks.—Philadelphia Press.

This is one of the times, which is about all the time, when the Democratic party will sit on the fence cursing or ridiculing the earnest men in public life who are trying to do things. While Republicans are working at the conservation movement in opposite ways the Democratic party will be faithfully conserving its grouch.

Mr. Bryan's inspection of the work on the Panama canal results in his announcing himself a convert to the administration plan for that enterprise. Here is one of the Roosevelt-Taft policies that Bryan does not claim to have been stolen from his stock in trade, but in which he honorably announces himself a follower.

Taft Policies.

So much has been said lately about what would come out of the White House if Mr. Roosevelt were still there, it is interesting to note that here and there is comment that Mr. Taft is more advanced in his views than Mr. Roosevelt was while in office. Here is something to think about and certain to be thought about. If people will talk about policies, here are things definite and individual enough to be called Taft policies.—Washington Star.

Home-Made Easter Hats

BY JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

EVEN this early in the season the powers that produce our Easter bonnets are working industriously on the millinery which will be in such demand at Easter time, and thereafter. Surrounded by counterparts of all the lovely blossoms we know, and others, born in the brain of the designers, the busy workers enthusiastically assemble braids and ribbons, feathers and flowers into fetching hats.

Why should not the tactful home dressmaker try her hand also, at making up a pretty, simple hat or so, for the coming spring? She has more time now than later and can indulge herself in more millinery or lessen the expenses of her spring headwear by a little hatmaking at home. It is fascinating work. All the home milliner needs is a little guidance. This does not mean that she can make all sorts of hats. The home-dressmaker who turns out a prety lawn dress, well done in every regard does not attempt the exacting tailor-made suit. It is the same with hats.

A good shape, developed in three different ways is shown in our illustrations. The home milliner may feel perfectly safe in attempting this hat. She needs to buy a wire frame of this or a similar shape, mull and braid to cover it, and the trimming materials.

Suppose our enterprising reader lives far enough south to expect warm weather on the 26th of March, for Easter is very early this year. She may select a fancy braid, flowers and ribbon for her hat. Roses and lilacs are always in style, as staple as ribbon, which is ever present in millinery. Probably she owns some good-looking roses and will need to freshen them up. This is done by carefully trimming the frayed edges of the petals and tinting them with water colors or with oil colors dissolved in gasoline. Two sprays of lilacs in their natural color and two clusters of roses with their foliage will make a wreath. Two and one-half yards of ribbon will make the full rosette bow, which consists of a group of loops four inches deep, sewed to a small piece of buckram.

The frame must first be covered with mull or crinoline, but preferably mull matching the braid in colors. A yard will cover the brim and crown, forming a foundation for the braid. Sew this over the frame as smoothly as possible, covering upper and under brim. Bind the edge of the brim with the braid and then cover the entire hat with it, sewing one row after another with the outer edge of each row overlapping the inner edge of the preceeding row. The under brim may be faced with ribbon like that used in the rosette if preferred.

As to color, the amethyst shades are a safe choice. Olive, moss or light greens, navy or light blues, tan, banana and light browns, in fact there is almost nothing in colors that will not harmonize with lilacs and roses.

The ribbon should be of the same color as the braid, but need not be just the same shade. Make the flower wreath and sew it to the hat. Then make the rosette, which is sewed on last. Finally the hat is lined with a scrap of silk, and is ready for wear, an achievement of which the clever maker has a right to be proud. If she has any misgivings about how to proceed with the making, let her examine any hats made of braid, which come within her reach.

Suppose, however, our home-milliner lives where an Easter falling in March is likely to be far from an ideal spring day. Her needs have been looked after, and she should choose braids in darker, stronger colors, than for flower-trimmed hats. A moss green, olive or clear bright navy, or any of the good shades of brown. The blue of the bluebird is the happiest of selections. For trimming, velvet ribbon, satin bows and fancy feather quills are the proper choice, or wings may be used. Let the satin ribbon be of the same color as the braid. The velvet ribbon may be a dash of bright color like cherry or coral or a darker shade of the same color as the satin ribbon.

For the feather, nothing is much prettier than the iridescent coque, but there are so many to choose from that one may use the individual taste in this matter. The velvet ribbon is threaded through small slashes cut in the covered frame, the fancy feathers are sewed on firmly and over them a group of loops made of two yards of No. 60 ribbon. If the matter of covering the hat with braid seems too difficult, a shape can be bought ready made and simply trimmed with folded satin ribbon, a cluster of quills and an ornament or flower placed in the center of a rosette made of loops. Five yards of ribbon are needed for this hat and two broad, or a cluster of narrow quills.

The ribbon is laid in folds and tucked about the hat in what is known as a "crushed" band. The rosette is a series of loops four inches deep sewed to a little piece of buckram, the size of a silver dollar. This is sewed to the hat after the band and quills have been adjusted. Finally an ornament or a flat flower is sewed at the center of the rosette, completing the trimming.

These hats provide one with something pretty for Easter and very useful for the spring and early summer, or for general wear all summer, for that matter. The last two described are very handsome in all black.

Twelve yards of braid are needed at least for this model, one yard of mull, and a spool of silk thread matching the braid in color. Finally, let me whisper to those interested, the masculine members of your family will think your achievement wonderfully clever, if you make your own hat.

Shank Buttons Best.

Just now, when large buttons are so much in vogue on shirtwaists and tub gowns, a quick and easy way to attach them so they may be removed for laundering is to use buttons with a shank, and fasten in place with small safety pins on the wrong side.

The spaces should be measured and marked with a few stitches just where the buttons should be, so they may be quickly attached after each trip to the laundry.

In this way one set of buttons will do duty for a number of suits.

Practical Traveling Coat.

One of the practical coats brought out for southern-bound travelers is the mannish ulster, made of white blanketing, white chinchilla or some similar white cloth, which is easily slipped into and out of when jumping into the machine for the ride to the links or homeward. The coats are of full or three-quarter length and have the advantage of being cozy, smart and of cleaning perfectly.

Delicate mosaic pendants, festooned with a fine chain of sterling silver plated with gold, form some of the imported necklaces.

Tree Planting on Waste Lands.

Coke of Holkham, so we learn from Mr. W. H. R. Curtler's short "History of English Agriculture," began his great agricultural work about 1776 on an estate where, as old Lady Townshead said, "all you will see will be one blade of grass, and two rabbits fighting for that;" in fact it was little better than a rabbit warren. He transformed the bleak, bare country side by planting 50 acres of trees every year until he had 3,000 acres well covered, and in 1832 had probably the unique experience of embarking in a ship which was built of oak grown from the acorns he had himself planted. Between 1776 and 1842 (the date of the death) he is said to have spent £536,992 on improving his estate.

Memorials to the Father of His Country

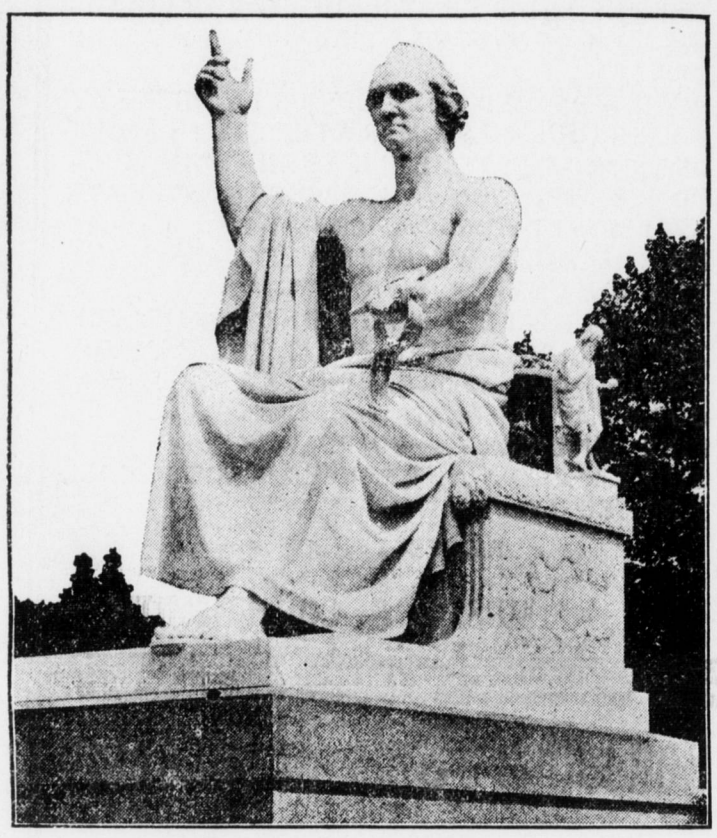
THE adage that republics are ungrateful would seem to be completely refuted by the manner in which the name and fame of George Washington have been commemorated at the American capital. It is no exaggeration to say that no other hero of any age or nation has been honored so conspicuously. The monuments, statues and other memorials whereby the first president has been given homage at the American seat of government are designed primarily, of course, to honor the individual for his whole notable career. At the same time the versatility of the many-sided Washington is emphasized by some of the memorials which, by their character, call to mind, respectively, his invaluable services as a citizen, as a soldier and as a statesman.



Greenough's Famous Statue of George Washington.

Ranking first, not only among the tributes to the new world liberator, but also in all probability, among all personal memorials throughout the world is the great Washington National monument—that imposing shaft of white marble rising on the banks of the Potomac river to bespeak the gratitude of the whole American people. This monument, which is the highest masonry structure in the world, and doubly impressive in its simplicity, is an obelisk and has a height of 555 feet. The foundation is 36 feet deep and the walls of the colossal structure are 15 feet in thickness at the bottom, gradually tapering to a thickness of 18 inches at the top. In the huge pile are stones contributed by 40 different states of the union and 16 American cities, as well as beautifully carved blocks of marble from Italy, Egypt, Greece, Switzerland, Japan, China, Siam, Brazil and other nations which took opportunity to pay tribute to the greatest patriot of all time.

Gen. Washington was yet living when there first originated the plan for providing this supreme testimonial to his military and political services. As early as 1783 the congress of the United States resolved to erect a marble monument to the nation's idol, and it is said that Washington himself selected a site the spot where the monument now stands. The project was revived from time to time after the death of Washington, but it was not until 1833 that practical steps were taken to carry out the undertaking. Funds were raised by popular subscription, and in 1848 the corner stone of the towering structure was laid with due ceremony. In 1855 the funds which had been contributed were exhausted, the shaft having at that time attained a height of 152 feet. Work ceased and the project was at a standstill for more than a score of years, or until 1878, when the national legislature appropriated money to complete the masonry masterpiece. The completed monument, which represents an expenditure of more than $1,300,000, was dedicated a quarter of a century ago, on February 21, 1885.

One of the most famous of the memorials and one which has had a most remarkable history is Horatio Greenough's heroic statue in marble of George Washington. This statue for years occupied the most conspicuous place on the plaza of the United States capitol, but latterly it has been removed to the Smithsonian institution. The figure of Washington, scantily arrayed, in the toga of a Roman senator, is represented in a sitting posture. The left hand clasps a short sword and the right hand points toward heaven. On the granite pedestal is inscribed the famous tribute of Gen. Henry Lee: "First in War, First in Peace, and First in the Hearts of His Countrymen."

The history of this statue dates from the year 1852 when congress authorized the president to employ the sculptor Greenough to execute a full length statue. The figure, which weighs fully 21 tons, was chiseled in Florence, Italy, and the problem of bringing it safely to America proved a most perplexing one. Commodore Hull was sent with a man-of-war to get the work of art, but he found that it would be necessary to rip up the ship's decks in order to place the cumbersome burden in the hold, and he objected to doing this. Finally, a merchant vessel had to be chartered for the task and partially reconstructed. The statue was first placed in the rotunda of the capitol, but later was placed on the plaza. The figure, which cost Uncle Sam more than $42,000, has always been the object of more or less criticism because of the lack of drapery.

In Washington is one of the few horseback monuments ever erected to the memory of the foremost military leader of his day. The equestrian statue of Washington, conspicuous even in a city that boasts more such statues than any other community on the continent—was produced by Clark Mills and was cast from cannon captured from the British in the war of 1812. Gen. Washington, dressed in continental uniform, is represented as witnessing the battle of Princeton. His horse represented in this statue was modeled from one captured from a wild herd on the prairie near Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

Swinging Around the Circle.

Washington believed in a president getting acquainted with his country, and in March, 1791, he set out on a tour of the southern states, riding on one set of horses 1,887 miles! and returning to Philadelphia, then the capital, July 6.

Was Matured Statesman.

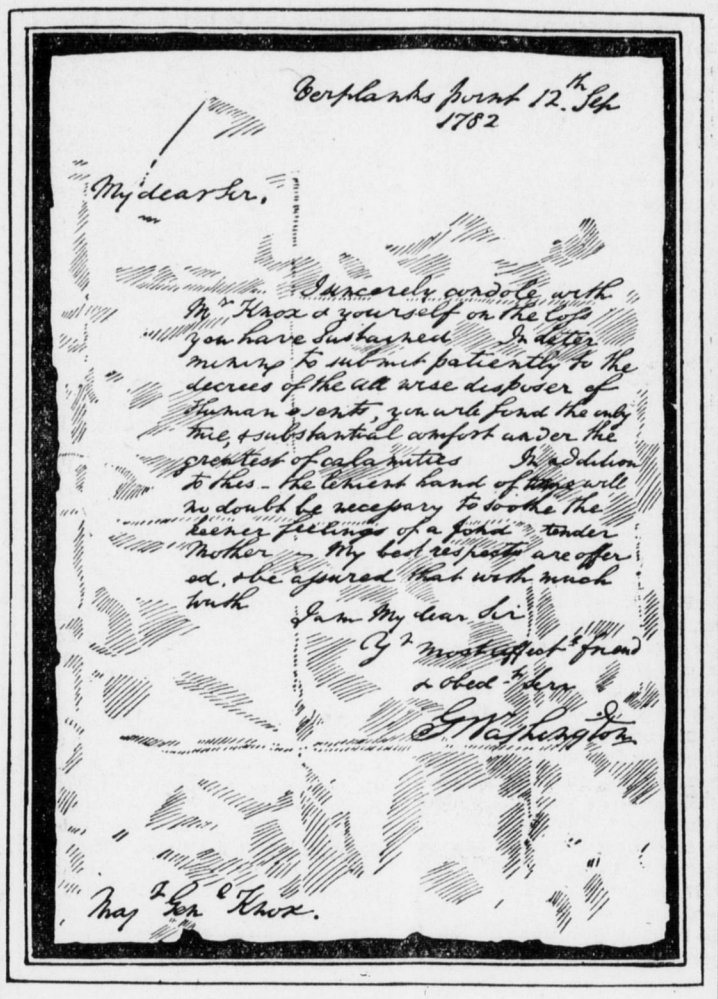
George Washington was 57 years old when he entered upon the office of president.

GENUINE LETTER OF WASHINGTON RECENTLY BROUGHT TO LIGHT



Fac-simile of the Letter.

THE above letter from George Washington, expressing sorrow for the death of Gen. Knox has been in the family of Gen. Knox since it was received from the first president of the United States. The present possessor of the document is Orville Dewey Thatcher, a veteran of the civil war, now in the division of the auditor for the postoffice department.

Mr. Thatcher received the letter from his uncle, Rear Admiral Henry Knox Thatcher, a member of the Society of the Cincinnati, by whom the epistle had been treasured as one of his most precious possessions.

The Thatcher family is of old New England stock. Thatcher's island, at the end of Cape Ann, known by all mariners for its two huge lighthouses, was named for one of the family. Samuel Thatcher, grandfather of Mr. O. D. Thatcher, was for many years the oldest graduate of Harvard, the oldest Mason and the oldest former member of congress. Mount Auburn cemetery on the outskirts of Boston, was the old Thatcher farm, settled by passengers of the Mayflower.

Authorship of Washington's Farewell Address

THERE does not seem to have been any unity of belief regarding the authorship of Washington's farewell address among some of the earlier historians, and much of the same confusion has resulted from the various and contradictory statements regarding Washington's retirement from public life. A page from a letter written to James Madison by Washington, in May, 1792, is to some extent an answer to some of the statements which have been made from time to time.

When all the facts in the case are arranged, there does not appear to be any mystery surrounding either the retirement of Washington or of the authorship of the historic address. Briefly, as the letter quoted in facsimile indicates, Washington had decided to retire from public life before the tide of opposition to him had set in, and had determined to prepare what he himself entitles a valedictory address. It is probable that no question regarding the authorship of the address would ever have arisen had not the untimely death of Hamilton, who was slain in the duel with Burr, thrown his private papers into the hands of persons who were not apprised of all the facts in the case. They, or some friends of Hamilton, about the middle of the last century, happened upon a draft of the address in the handwriting of Hamilton, and immediately spread the intelligence that Washington's secretary of the treasury was the real author of the paper.

Some historians, having in mind the wave of opposition to Washington which arose during his first term of office, and which became more bitter during his second term, have intimated that the retirement of the first president was merely the act of a man who saw that he had lost his popularity and had enough common sense not to linger where he had become unendurable. In 1792 Washington still was the popular idol. There has been no disagreement on that score among the historians, and it was on May 20 of that year, during this period of good will, that the Father of His Country decided to retire from public life. It was also at this time that he was devising in his mind a dignified method of making this withdrawal.

The letter was among Madison's papers at his death, and some years ago was sold at auction in New York, bringing $1,325, and passing into the collection of one of the New York collectors.

There is nothing in this letter to indicate that Washington retired from public life on account of his unpopularity, and, if it were necessary, would show that Hamilton was not the author of the valedictory address. Madison, appealed to in the letter just quoted, did find time to draw up such an address as Washington indicated. This was submitted to the president, and the latter prepared a paper from it. This copy he submitted to Jay, at that time chief justice of the United States supreme court, and to Alexander Hamilton, the secretary of the treasury. In forwarding the paper to Hamilton, Washington wrote: "Even if you should think it best to throw the whole into a different form let me suggest, notwithstanding, that my draught may be returned to me (along with yours) with such amendments and corrections as to render it as perfect as the formation is susceptible of; curtailed, if too verbose, and relieved of all tautology not necessary to enforce the ideas in the original or quoted part. My wish is that the whole may appear in a plain style, and be handed to the public in an honest, unaffected, simple part."

Hamilton prepared a draft which Washington said he preferred to others submitted to him. It was mainly a change in form, but Hamilton's paper is said to have differed much from the original. This draft was followed by Washington, who wrote the address and then submitted the new production to Pickering, McHenry and Wolcott. These made few changes and these are said to have been, as Pickering has recorded, "regarding chiefly the grammar and composition."

Although the first letter to Madison on the subject bears the date of May 20, 1792, the farewell address was not given to the people until September 19, 1796. In the meantime, as has been shown, it was undergoing repeated alteration and improvement at various hands, yet the main ideas were Washington's, and the final draft not only was in his hand, but very largely was of his own composition.

Washington Dissatisfied.

George Washington had his periods of discontent like the rest of us, as is shown in a letter he wrote his brother soon after the Braddock campaign: "I was employed to go on a journey in the winter which I believe few or none would have undertaken—and what did I get by it? My expenses borne. I was then appointed, with trifling pay, to conduct a handful of men to the Ohio. What did I get for that? Why, after paying myself the considerable expense in equipping and providing necessities for the company, I went out, was soundly beaten and had my commission taken from me, or, in other words, my command reduced under the pretense of an order from home. I then went out and volunteered under Gen. Braddock and lost all my horses and many other things. I have been on the losing order ever since I entered the service two years since."

If you try this method we believe you will not want to let a single issue of this paper go to press without something from your store.

About three years ago I started to use Foley's Honey and Tar, and it has never failed to prevent and cure these troubles. It is the only medicine I can get the children to take without a row." ### Schoolboy Logic.

"Should women have votes for parliament? Give your reasons for and against." This was a question asked of schoolboys in a recent examination in England. One boy replied: "No, because if they did they would want to get into parliament and then they would pass a lot of silly laws, such as that a man was not to smoke before his wife or that wives were to have Wednesdays and Thursdays off and then the men would have to stay at home and mind the children."

A logical answer to the question, "Why does a kettle sing?" was furnished by a boy who wrote, "Because if it did not you could not tell when the kettle was boiling." Asked to explain the initials "C. O. D.," one boy replied that they stood for "collector of debts," and a second said "cod-liver oil drink."

Another enterprising youth described a sleeping partner as "a man who goes to sleep when playing bridge." Asked how he would mend a puncture in a bicycle tire, a boy's answer was to the point, "I would get a box of stuff that you do it with and stick it on."

Importance of a Word.

If you should write a letter to the man who is chief magistrate of this republic you are at liberty to address him as "The President, Washington, D. C." That will be sufficient. He is not "his excellency," as is the supreme executive magistrate of Massachusetts, nor "his high mightiness," a title which, they say, sounded pleasing to the ear of the Father of His Country. But if you should write a letter to the secretary of state of the United States, whom the plain "president" appointed to the job, prepare to dip your pen in honorific ink. While the chief magistrate is plain "president," without any titular epaulets, his secretary of state is "the honorable secretary of state." It will not do to address him as "the secretary of state" simply. He is something more than that. The etiquette of the state department requires that the word "honorable" be prefixed to the word "secretary."—Boston Globe.

Fire Prevention Among Pines.

Pines protect themselves against forest fires in a remarkable manner. For four or five years the stems of the infant trees attain a height of only as many inches above the soil. During this time their bark is extraordinarily thick, and that alone gives some protection. But, in addition, the long needles spring up above the stem and then bend on all sides in a green cascade which falls to the ground in a circle about the seedling. This green barrier can with difficulty be made to burn, while the shade that it casts prevents inflammable grass from growing near the protected stem. The officers of the forestry service at Washington are of opinion that it is owing to this peculiar system of self protection which the pine seedlings have developed that the growth of evergreen oaks in Florida has been restricted in regions where fires have raged, while pine forests have taken their place.—Harper's Weekly.

When Wives Were Sold.

When the war between Britain and France ended in 1815 many of the English soldiers found that their wives had married again in the belief that they were widows. The formal selling of the wife was regarded among the ignorant as a legal solution to the problem thus presented, and it is said that the authorities of the day deemed it best to shut their eyes at the proceeding. A certain amount of formality had to be observed, however, before the sale was considered legal even by the most ignorant. A Yorkshire writer mentions two conditions which must be carried out to make a satisfactory sale—the price of the wife must not be less than 1 shilling (24 cents), and she must be delivered to her purchaser with a new halter around her neck. The same writer records the case of the woman who zealously preserved the receipts for herself as a proof of respectability.

Humor and Morality.

We have extirpated gross humor from our modern literature, but we must not suppose that we are therefore more moral than the Elizabethans, whose literature was full of gross humor. It may be that we are only more afraid of ourselves and each other. This kind of fear is destructive not only of gross humor, but of humor of all kinds. In its essence humor is brave as it is honest, but with cowardice and dishonesty there come base substitutes for it, substitutes that make fun of noble things with a humorous air, and so bring humor itself into discredit.—London Times.

A Great Mystery Solved.

How many hairpins does a woman use when doing her hair? The hairpin editor has investigated and makes this report: "She uses just as many as she has. If she has only two hairpins she makes her hair stay up with two, but if she finds twenty in the top bureau drawer she uses all of them."—Atchison Globe.

A Sensitive Patient.

Dr. Emdee—Feet go to sleep? That shows your circulation is bad. Editor—That's all you quacks know. I suppose if my corns ached that would show that advertising patronage was falling off.

The Best of It.

Mrs. Gadsby—She says frankly that she can't play bridge, but that isn't the best of it. Mrs. Bungwats—What is? Mrs. Gadsby—She doesn't try.—Somerville Journal.

An even disposition is the best pilot on the sea of life.

Steel Cars.

What is probably the largest steel passenger car equipment owned by any railroad in the world is that of the Pennsylvania Railroad which, with the cars just completed and those in course of construction, has 630 all-steel passenger cars. With this large number of steel cars, the Pennsylvania Railroad is now to start the operation of all-steel car passenger trains on some of its lines of densest traffic.

On August 12th, 1906, the Pennsylvania Railroad announced that all future passenger equipment would be built of steel; not only steel frame, but steel and non-collapsible in every particular. In planning the cars and establishing the standards, which are now copied in all the Pennsylvania passenger cars, no expense has been spared by the company to build a coach which should provide the greatest possible strength, a steel framing which conld not be affected by fire, an inside lining which should be absolutely unburnable, and, at the same time, one that would not conduct heat or sound.

The Pennsylvania Railroad in November, 1906, ordered 100 all-steel passenger care. Since that time additional ordeas have been placed and there are now in service on the Company's lines 245 coaches, 10 dining cars, 21 combination passenger and baggage cars, 29 baggage cars, 18 postal cars, and one company car; a total of 324 cars. In course of construction there are 110 coaches, 34 dining cars, 48 combination passenger and baggage cars, 4 baggage cars, 42 postal cars, 27 mail storage cars, and 11 baggage and mail cars.

The Pullman Company, at the instance of the Pennsylvania Railroad, has for the last four years been at work designing all-steel parlor and sleeping cars. Some 500 such cars are shortly to be completed and placed in service on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

With the all-steel passenger equipment now in service or on order, and some 250 steel cars to be ordered on the 1910 passenger equipment program, the Pennsylvania Railroad will, in a short time, have in service about 900 of its own steel passenger cars, and 500 steel Pullman cars.

ACKNOWLEDGE IT.

Emporium Has to Bow to the Inevitable—Scores of Citizens Prove It.

After reading the public statement of this representative citizen of Emporium given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which cured years ago, which has kept the kidneys in good health since, can be relied upon to perform the same work in other cases. Read this:

Mrs. John Summerson, W. Sixth St., Emporium, Pa., says: "My back ached most of the time and there was a soreness across my kidneys. Rheumatic pains darted through my limbs and in the morning when I got up, I felt tired and languid. Hearing that Doan's Kidney Pills were an excellent preparation for complaints of this kind, I procured a supply at Taggart's drug store. The remedies I had previously taken had not helped me, but Doan's Kidney Pills brought relief at once. I now feel much stronger and better in every way."

The above statement was given in October 1907 and on December 14, 1909, Mrs. Summerson confirmed it in detail.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Kidney disease is a dangerous ailment. You should never delay a moment to take some good, reliable, dependable remedy. In such cases we recommend DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills. These wonderful pills are being used by thousands of people daily with fine results. They are for weak kidneys, weak back, backache, inflammation of the bladder and all urinary disorders. When you ask for DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve, refuse to accept a substitute or imitation. DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve is good for anything when you need a salve, and it is especially good for piles. Sold by all druggists.

Harmony of Dress.

A beautiful woman also studies the harmony of painting a well kept home, takes care to have the house painted with paint that will continue to look bright,clean and fresh looking. The L. & M., never becomes dingy, because only chemically pure colors are used, only the finest White Lead, only the purest of Linseed Oil, only expert paint-makers produce it with machinery, a thousand gallons at a time. Contrast this with the costly and crude production of White Lead Paint made by hard labor with stick in a pot—a few gallons at a time. L & M., is sold by Harry S. Lloyd, Emporium, Pa.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

TROTTER.

THOMAS TROTTER, who was taken to the Warren Hospital about two weeks ago, hoping the treatment might be beneficial, but he continued to fail and death relieved the great sufferer, last Friday night. Undertaker Mr. B. Egan went to Warren and returned with the remains, Saturday, taking them to his undertaking rooms and prepared them for burial. The casket was removed to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Pepperman, West Fourth Street, where the deceased and his invalid and helpless wife made their home and were kindly cared for by Mrs. Pepperman.

Deceased came to America from England, where he was born, May 18, 1830, at Ricktree, Durham county. From his youth he was engaged in the dry goods business and thoroughly understood it. In 1851 he was married to Miss Hannah Johnston. About twenty years ago her health failed and they came to America, hoping the change would be beneficial but she continued to grow worse. Sixteen years ago to Emporium, Mr. Trotter taking charge of the D. E. Olmsted's dry goods store, where he could be constantly with and care for his helpless wife. His faithfulness and tender care, so well known and favorably commented by all who knew them. He continued until his frail body and mind gave away and he too broke down completely. Kind friends saw they were comfortably cared for, and being highly respected, they never lacked friends.

Mrs. Trotter, who bravely bears her cross in sorrow, is a very devout Christian lady, and bears up wonderfully well, knowing that God's way is the best.

The funeral took place Monday afternoon from Mr. Pepperman's residence and was very largely attended. Rev. J. M. Robertson, Rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, who had been an intimate friend and constant adviser, conducted the services and feelingly and ably delivered the sermon, full of good thought. Both Mr. and Mrs. Trotter united with Emmanuel Church soon after coming to Emporium. A quartette composed of Mrs. T. F. More, Miss Grace A. Walker, and Messrs. Geo. A. Walker and W. S. Sterner very beautifully rendered favorite hymns.

The remains were interred in Wiley Cemetery in the family lot, beside their son, John William.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with the shipwreck of the steamer on which Miss Genevieve Leslie, an American heiress, Lord Winthrope, an Englishman, and Tom Blake, a brusque American, were passengers. The three were tossed upon an uninhabited island and were the only ones not drowned. Blake, shunned on the boat, because of his roughness, became a hero as preserver of the helpless pair. The Englishman was suing for the hand of Miss Leslie. Winthrope wasted his last match on a cigarette, for which he was scored by Blake. All three constructed hats to shield themselves from the sun. They then feasted on cocoanuts, the only procurable food. Miss Leslie showed a liking for Blake, but detested his roughness. Led by Blake, they established a home in some cliffs. Blake found a fresh water spring. Miss Leslie faced an unpleasant situation. Blake recovered his surveyor's magnifying glass, thus insuring fire. He started a jungle fire, killing a large leopard and smothering several cubs. In the leopard's cavern they built a small home. They gained the cliffs by burning the bottom of a tree until it fell against the heights. The trio secured eggs from the cliffs. Miss Leslie's white skirt was decided upon as a signal. Miss Leslie made a dress from the leopard skin. Overhearing a conversation between Blake and Winthrope, Miss Leslie became frightened. Winthrope became ill with fever. Blake was poisoned by a fish and almost died. Jackals attacked the camp that night, but were driven off by Genevieve. Blake constructed an animal trap. It killed a hyena. On a tour the trio discovered honey and oysters. Miss Leslie was attacked by a poisonous snake. Blake killed it and saved its poison to kill game. For the second time Winthrope was attacked by fever. He and Blake disagreed. The latter made a strong door for the private compartment of Miss Leslie's cave home. A terrible storm raged that night. Winthrope stole into her room, but she managed to swing her door closed in time. Winthrope was badly hurt.

CHAPTER XX.—Continued.

"Too late," muttered Blake. "See here, Winthrope, there's no use lying about it. You're going out mighty soon. See if you can't die like a man."

"Die! Gawd, but I can't die—I can't die— Ow! it burns!"

He flung up a hand, and sought to tear at his wounds.

"Hold hard!" cried Blake, catching the hand in an iron grip.

Something in his touch, or the tone of command, seemed to cower the wretched man into a state of abject submission.

"S'elp me, I'll confess!—I'll confess all!" he babbled. "The stones are sewed in the stomach pad; I 'ad to take 'em hout of their settings, and melt up the gold." He paused, and a cunning smile stole over his distorted features. "Ho, wot a bloomin' lark! Valet plays the gent, an' they never 'as a hinkling! Mr. Cecil Winthrope, hif you please, an' a 'int of a title—wot a lark! 'Awkings, me lad, you're a gay 'oaxer! Wot a lark! wot a lark!"

His voice shrilled out in quavering appeal: "Don't—don't look at me, miss! I tried to make myself a gentleman; God knows I tried! I fought my way up out of the East End—out of that hell—and none ever lifted finger to help me. I educated myself like a scholar—then the stock sharks cheated me of my savings—out of the last penny; and I had to take service. My God! a valet—his grace's valet, and I a scholar! Do you wonder the devil got into me? Do you—"

Blake's deep voice, firm but strangely husky, broke in upon and silenced the cry of agony: "There, I guess you've said enough."

"Enough—and last night— My God! to be such a beast! The devil tempted me—aye, and he's paid me out in my own coin! I'm done for! God ha' mercy on me!—God ha' mercy—"

Again came the gasping rattle; this time there was no rally.

Blake thrust himself between Miss Leslie and the crumpled figure.

"Get back around the tree," he said harshly.

"What are you going to do?"

"That's my business," he replied. He thrust his burning-glass into her hand. "Here; go and build a fire, if you can find any dry stuff."

"You're not going to— You'll bury him!"

"Yes. Whatever he may have been, he's dead now, poor devil!"

"I can't go," she half whispered, "not until—until I've learned— Do you—can you tell me just what is paranoia?"

Blake studied a little, and tapped the top of his head.

"Near as I can say, it's softening of the brain—up there."

"Do you think that—" she hesitated—"that he had it?"

"Yes, I do. But if you'll go, please."

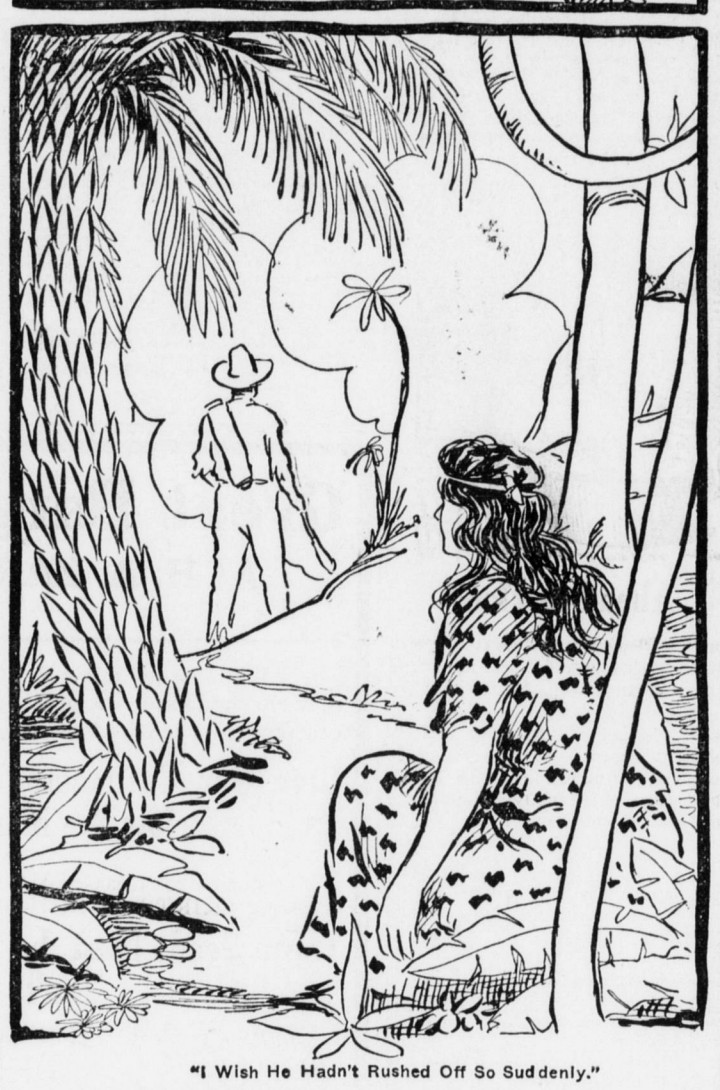
"One thing more—I must know now! Do you remember the day when you set up the signal and you—you quarreled with him?"

Blake reddened and dropped his gaze. "Did he go and tell you that? The sneak!"

"If you please, let us say nothing more about him. But would you care to tell me what you meant—what you said then?"

Blake's flush deepened; but he raised his head, and faced her squarely as he answered: "No; I'm not going to repeat any dead man's talk; and as for what I said, this isn't the time or place to say anything in that line—now that we're alone. Understand?"

"I'm afraid I do not, Mr. Blake. Please explain."



"I Wish He Hadn't Rushed Off So Suddenly."

"Don't ask me, Miss Jenny. I can't tell you now. You'll have to wait till we get aboard ship. We'll catch a steamer before long. 'Tisn't every one of them that goes ashore in these blows."

"Why did you build that door? Did you suspect—" She glanced down at the huddled figure between them.

Blake frowned and hesitated; then burst out almost angrily: "Well, you know now he was a sneak; so it's not blabbing to tell that much—I knew he was before; and it's never safe to trust a sneak."

"Thank you!" she said, and she turned away quickly that she might not again look at the prostrate figure.

CHAPTER XXI.

Wreckage and Salvage.

ALL the wood in the cleft was sodden from the fierce downpour that had accompanied the cyclone; all the cleft bottom other than the bare ledges was a bed of mud; everything without the tree-cave had been either blown away or heaped with broken boughs and mud-spattered rubbish. But the girl had far too much to think about to feel any concern over the mere damage and destruction of things. It was rather a relief to find something that called for work.

Catching sight of a bit of white down among the bamboos, she went to it, and was not a little surprised to see the tattered remnant of her duck skirt. It had evidently been torn from the signal staff by the first gust of the cyclone, whirled down into the cleft by some flaw or eddy in the wind, and wadded so tightly into the heart of the thick clump of stems that all the fury of the storm had failed to dislodge it. Its recovery seemed to the girl a special providence; for of course they must keep up a signal on the cliff.

Having started her fire and set on a stew, she hunted out her sewing materials from their crevice in the cave and began mending the slits in the torn flag. While she worked she sat on a shaded ledge, her bare feet toasting in the sun, and her soggy, mud-smeared moccasins drying within reach. When Blake appeared, the moccasins were still where she had first set them, but the little pink feet were safely tucked up beneath the tattered flag. Fortunately, the sight of the white cloth prevented Blake from noticing the moccasins.

"Hello!" he exclaimed. "What's that?—the flag? Say, that's luck! I'll break out a bamboo right off. Old staff's carried clean away."

"Mr. Blake—just a moment, please. What have you done with—with it?"

Blake jerked his thumb upward.

"You have carried him up on the cliff?"

"Best place I could think of. No animals—and I piled stones over—But, I say, look here."

He drew out a piece of wadded cloth, marked off into little squares by crossing lines of stitches. One of the squares near the edge had been ripped open. Blake thurst in his finger and worked out an emerald the size of a large pea.

"O-h-h!" cried Miss Leslie, as he held the glittering gem out to her in his rough palm.

He drew it back and carefully thrust it again into its pocket.

"That's one," he said. "There's another in every square of this innocent, harmless rag—dozens of them. He must have made a clean sweep of the duke's—or, more like, the duchess' jewels. Now, if you please, I want you to sew this up tight again, and—"

"I cannot—I cannot touch it!" she cried.

"Say, I didn't mean to— It was confounded stupid of me," mumbled Blake. "Won't you excuse me?"

"Of course! It was only the—the thought that—"

"No wonder. I always am a fool when it comes to ladies. I'll fix the thing all right."

Catching up the nearest small pot, he crammed the quilted cloth down within it, and filled it to the brim with sticky mud.

"There! Guess nobody's going to run off with a jug of mud—and it won't hurt the stones till we get a chance to look up the owner. He won't be hard to find—English duke minus a pint of first-class sparklers! Will you mind its setting in the cave after things are fixed up?"

"No; not as it is."

He nodded soberly. "All right, then. Now I'll go for the new flagstaff. You might set out breakfast."

She nodded in turn, and when he came back from the bamboos with the largest of the great canes on his shoulder, his breakfast was waiting for him. She set it before him, and turned to go again to her sewing.

"Hold on," he said. "This won't do. You've got to eat your share."

"I do not—I am not hungry."

"That's no matter. Here!"

He forced upon her a bowl of hot broth, and she drank it because she could not resist his rough kindness.

He bolted the last of his meat, and at once left her alone to cry herself back to calmness over the stitching of the signal.

His first concern was for the barricade. As he had feared, he found that it had been blown to pieces. The greater part of the thorn branches which he had gathered with so much labor were scattered to the four corners of the earth. He stood staring at the wreckage in glum silence; but he did not swear, as he would have done the week before. Presently his face cleared, and he began to whistle in a plaintive minor key. He was thinking of how she had looked when she darted out of the tree at his call—of her concern for him. When he was so angered at Winthrope, she had called him Tom!

After a time he started on, picking his way over the remnant of the barricade, without a falter in his whistling. The deluge of rain had poured down the cleft in a torrent, tearing away the root-matted soil and laying bare the ledges in the channel of the spring rill. But aside from an occasional boggy hole, the water had drained away.

At the foot, about the swollen pool, was a wide stretch of rubbish and mud. He worked his way around the edge, and came out on the plain, where the sandy soil was all the firmer for its drenching. He swung away at a lively clip. The air was fresh and pure after the storm, and a slight breeze tempered the sun-rays.

He kept on along the cliff until he turned the point. It was not altogether advisable to bathe at this time of day; but he had been caught out by the cyclone in a corner of the swamp, across the river, where the soil was of clay. Only his anxiety for Miss Leslie had enabled him to fight his way out of the all but impassable morass which the storm deluge had made of the half-dry swamp. At dawn he had reached the river, and swam across, reckless of the crocodiles. The turbid water of the stream had rid him of only part of his accumulated slime and ooze. So now he washed out his tattered garments as well as he could without soap, and while they were drying on the sun-scorched rocks, swam about in the clear, tonic sea-water, quite as reckless of the sharks as he had been of the ugly crocodiles in the river.

For all this, he was back at the baobab before Miss Leslie had stitched up the last slit in the torn flag.

She looked up at him, with a brave attempt at a smile.

"I am afraid I'm not much of a needle-woman," she sighed. "Look at those stitches!"

"Don't fret. They'll hold all right, and that's what we want," he reassured her. "Give it me, now. I've got to get it up, and hurry back for a nap. No sleep last night—I was out beyond the river, in the swamp—and to-night I'll have to go on watch. The barricade is down."

"Oh, that is too bad! Couldn't I take a turn on watch?"

Blake shook his head. "No; I'll sleep to-day, and work rebuilding the barricade to-night. Toward morning I might build up the fire, and take a nap."

He caught up the flag and its new staff, and swung away through the cleft.

He returned much sooner than Miss Leslie expected, and at once began to throw up a small lean-to of bamboos over a ledge at the cliff foot, behind the baobab. The girl thought he was making himself a hut, in place of the canopy under which he had slept before the storm, which, like Winthrope's, had been carried away. But when he stopped work, he laconically informed her that all she had to do to complete her new house was to dry some leaves.

"But I thought it was for yourself!" she protested. "I will sleep inside the tree."

"Doc Blake says no!" he rejoined—"not till it's dried out."

She glanced at his fact, and replied, without a moment's hesitancy: "Very well. I will do what you think best."

"That's good," he said, and went at once to lie down for his much needed sleep.

He awoke just soon enough before dark to see the results of her hard day's labor. All the provisions stored in the tree had been brought out to dry, and a great stack of fuel, ready for burning, was piled up against the baobab; while all about the tree the rubbish had been neatly gathered together in heaps. Blake looked his admiration for her industry. But then his forehead wrinkled.

"You oughtn't to've done so much," he admonished.

"I'll show you I can tote fair!" she rejoined. During the afternoon she had recalled to mind that odd expression of a southern girl chum, and had been waiting her opportunity to banter him with it.

He stared at her open-eyed, and laughed.

"Say, Miss Jenny, you'd better look out. You'll be speaking American, first thing!"

Thereupon, they fell to chatting like children out of school, each happy to be able to forget for the moment that broken figure up on the cliff top and the haunting fear of what another day might bring to them.

When they had eaten their meal, both with keen appetites, Blake sprang up, with a curt "Good-night!" and swung off down the cleft. The girl looked after him with a lingering smile.

"I wish he hadn't rushed off so suddenly," she murmured. "I was just going to thank him for—for everything!"

The color swept over her face in a deep blush, and she darted around to her tiny hut as though some one might have overheard her whisper.

Yet, after all, she had said nothing; or, at least, she had merely said "everything."

FARMER SHOULD PROVIDE DIPPING TANK FOR SHEEP

Advantages of This Treatment Are Great and Not Expensive or Difficult to Build—A Good Plan.

(By EDWIN S. GOOD.)

Scabby sheep should be dipped at the first opportunity, for if kept until shearing time most of the wool may be lost and the vitality of the animal greatly reduced. All sheep badly affected with the disease should, before being dipped, have the thick scabs softened by pouring some of the dip on them and rubbing them with a smooth stick, care being taken, however, not to draw blood, for upon coagulation it is likely to protect the mite from the dip. They should then be allowed to stand for at least half an hour before being put into the bath. Each sheep should be immersed in the dip for two minutes by the watch, the head being ducked at least once just before the animal emerges from the vat. Within 10 or 14 days the dipping should be repeated in order to kill all mites hatched since the first dipping, as the eggs are more resistant to the dips than are the mites.

Sheep may be dipped in the winter in many localities, but warm, dry days must be selected for the purpose and the dipping discontinued in the middle of the afternoon. If the sheep, after being dipped, are allowed to stand for a few hours on the sunny side of a barn they will not chill as quickly as if turned inside a building at once.

Dipping vats can be made of wood, metal or concrete. A farmer owning as many as 25 sheep should have a good dipping vat. For a small number than this the barrel used to scald the pigs will do if the farmer feels that he cannot afford to purchase or build a vat. A good galvanized vat ten feet long and four feet deep, made purposely for dipping, can be purchased for about $12. There are smaller sizes than this that can be purchased for less money. Three or four farmers can club together and purchase one of the galvanized tanks and haul it to their respective farms as it is wanted. A dipping vat for sheep should be narrow enough to prevent the sheep turning around in it, and deep enough to swim large sheep. The length of the vat should depend upon the number of sheep which can be dipped in a day. There is considerable variation as to the width of vats found on different farms, and as a usual thing they are wider than necessary. Then, too, the narrower the vat the less the dip required to fill it. A vat twenty inches wide at the top and eight inches wide at the bottom is a fair average as regards width, although some very practical sheep men construct their vats as narrow as sixteen inches at the top and six inches at the bottom when the vat is four feet deep.

The dipping vat used at the Kentucky experiment station is located in the driveway of the hoghouse and can be used for the dipping of sheep and young pigs. It is built entirely of concrete, the walls of which are six inches in width, with the exception of the partition between the vat and dry chamber, which has a thickness of nine inches. The end of the vat into which the hogs and sheep are plunged is perpendicular, while the opposite end is provided with an incline which is quite deeply creased so that the animal can walk out. The floor around the end of the vat from which the sheep emerge is so graded that all drippings return to the vat. There are sewer connections with this outfit, the valve of which is located in the dry chamber. The dry chamber allows the attendant to carefully control the dripping, break up thick scabs with a brush, and, if necessary help the sheep up the incline, and also go to the aid of a sheep quickly if it shows signs of strangling. This vat is quite inexpensive.

A chute like this can be built with little trouble. The incline to the vat should be made of smooth lumber and greased when hogs or sheep are dipped. In dipping animals the second time they usually remember the first experience and endeavor to jump the length of the vat unless the swing door is attached to the end of the chute. As an extra "blind" to either sheep or hogs a board can be fixed on a pivot and extended horizontally from the top of the chute toward the vat. The sheep imagines it a level surface on which to walk, only to find, as one or two steps are taken, that the end toward the vat tips down, plunging him quickly into the vat.

PROPER CARE GIVEN SWINE

Feed and Attention Must Be Varied in Accordance with What Is Desired to Be Done with Animal.

(By A. J. LOVEJOY.)

The pig that is to be sold for meat has but a few months to live and there should be no let-up in feeding from birth.

It will begin to eat shelled corn at three or four weeks' of age, and a little sweet skim-milk or a thick mush of the same material as that given the mother is a great help to hasten growth.

Well-bred or even good-grade pigs should weigh sixty to eighty pounds when weaned at three months of age, and should then go on alfalfa or other green pasture and have corn twice a day.

Late in the summer there should be ready for them a pasture of rape, field peas or soy beans, besides the corn.

If their teeth become sore, change to shelled corn, soaked 24 hours in water slightly salted.

It will pay to have a cool, shady place where it is rather dark, if possible, for the pigs to lie in during the heat of the day, with free access to a mixture of salt, copperas, lime and ashes.

The feeder should watch closely to see that every pig is eating with a relish.

If pigs cough it is probably due to a dusty shed. Worms will also cause a cough, and if the hair becomes starving and dead in appearance it is well to give a worm powder.

In raising hogs to be used as breeders the object is very different. They are not to go to market at six to ten months of age, but to grow on to maturity.

They should be pushed for rapid growth, but must be fed for a growth of frame and bone; not fattened on corn, but expanded by a feed rich in protein.

At six to eight or ten months of age they should show more length of body and more scale than the market hogs and be smooth and well covered, but not so fat as for market.

This can be very easily done by feeding a mixed grain ration, with ten per cent. of tankage or ten per cent. of oil meal.

Use corn, barley and oats ground together, mixed thickly with water and fed at once while sweet. It is much better to mix three pounds of milk to one pound of grain.

If one has no milk the next best feed is ten per cent. of tankage. If one has the corn and does not want to buy the mill feeds, he can use 80 per cent. of corn and 20 per cent. of tankage and have a well-balanced ration.

The summer treatment of young pigs should be about the same as for the market pigs. For late summer and fall I have made it a practice to have a field of Evergreen sweet corn to feed in the roasting ear.

I begin by adding one stalk and ear for each pig in addition to his other feed; in a few days, two stalks and two ears, and gradually increase this amount to a full feed, while diminishing the other ration.

In winter the brood sows should have something to take the place of the green pasture.

I know of nothing that will equal alfalfa, bright and green, run through a cutting machine. Two-thirds chaffed alfalfa and one-third shelled corn, mixed together and ground in a steel bur grinder, makes an almost ideal ration, which can be fed dry or mixed thickly with scalding water; a little salt adds relish. It is a cheap ration and has just bulk enough to take the place of grass.

If one cannot have alfalfa, bright, well-cured clover is good. Sorghum cane is a good fall feed until heavy freezing. Mangles or sugar beets are of course very good.

Our Wheat Crop.

Considerable more than 50 per cent. of the entire wheat crop of 1907, estimated in round numbers at 634,800,000 bushels, was grown in 15 of the older states east of the Mississippi, their gross yield being placed at 382,000,000 bushels. This is more than three times as much as the largest wheat crop ever grown in the Canadian northwest.

CLIP THIS OUT

Renowned Doctor's Prescription for Rheumatism and Backache.

"One ounce Syrup Sarsaparilla compound; one ounce Toris compound; Add these to a half pint of good whiskey: Take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bed time; Shake the bottle before using each time." Any druggist has these ingredients in stock or will quickly get them from his wholesale house. This was published previously and hundreds here have been cured by it. Good results show after the first few doses. This also acts as a system builder, eventually restoring strength and vitality.

CALLOUS TO CRITICISM.

The Husband—As far as I am concerned, you may scold as much as you like. I am by nature thick-skinned.

SCRATCHED SO SHE COULD NOT SLEEP

"I write to tell you how thankful I am for the wonderful Cuticura Remedies. My little niece had eczema for five years and when her mother died I took care of the child. It was all over her face and body, also on her head. She scratched so that she could not sleep nights. I used Cuticura Soap to wash her with and then applied Cuticura Ointment. I did not use quite half the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, together with Cuticura Resolvent, when you could see a change and they cured her nicely. Now she is eleven years old and has never been bothered with eczema since. My friends think it is just great the way the baby was cured by Cuticura. I send you a picture taken when she was about 18 months old.

"She was taken with the eczema when two years old. She was covered with big sores and her mother had all the best doctors and tried all kinds of salves and medicines without effect until we used Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. H. Kiernan, 663 Quincy St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 27, 1909."

Knew the Calendar.

They were little girls, so small that the teacher was telling them about divisions of time, and receiving all sorts of answers to her simple questions. The little girl who lived in a boarding house was a year older than any of the others.

"We have learned that years are divided into months, months into weeks, and weeks into days," said the teacher. "Now can any one tell me how the days are divided?"

The little girl who lived in a boarding house raised her hand, and was asked to speak.

"Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, beef," she said, glibly; "Friday, fish; Saturday, corned beef and beans; and Sunday, chicken."—Youth's Companion.

Jim's Cost a Dollar More.

Richard Le Gallienne, the noted poet, was entertaining a group of magazine editors at luncheon in New York.

To a compliment upon his fame Mr. Le Gallienne said, lightly:

"But what is poetical fame in this age of prose? Only yesterday a schoolboy came and asked me for my autograph. I assented willingly. And to-day at breakfast time, the boy again presented himself.

"'Will you give me your autograph, sir?' he said.

"'But,' said I, 'I gave you my autograph yesterday.'

"'I swapped that and a dollar,' he answered, 'for the autograph of Jim Jeffries.'"

HARD TO DROP
But Many Drop It.

A young Calif. wife talks about coffee: "It was hard to drop Mocha and Java and give Postum a trial, but my nerves were so shattered that I was a nervous wreck and of course that means all kinds of ails.

"At first I thought bicycle riding caused it and I gave it up, but my condition remained unchanged. I did not want to acknowledge coffee caused the trouble for I was very fond of it. At that time a friend came to live with us, and I noticed that after he had been with us a week he would not drink his coffee any more. I asked him the reason. He replied, 'I have not had a headache since I left off drinking coffee, some months ago, till last week, when I began again, here at your table. I don't see how anyone can like coffee, anyway, after drinking Postum!'

"I said nothing, but at once ordered a package of Postum. That was five months ago, and we have drank no coffee since, except on two occasions when we had company, and the result each time was that my husband could not sleep, but lay awake and tossed and talked half the night. We were convinced that coffee caused his suffering, so he returned to Postum, convinced that coffee was an enemy, instead of a friend, and he is troubled no more with insomnia.

"I, myself, have gained 8 pounds in weight, and my nerves have ceased to quiver. It seems so easy now to quit coffee that caused our aches and ails and take up Postum."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

EIGHTEEN YEARS AGO HE HAD LESS THAN 3 DOLLARS

HE IS NOW ONE OF THE RICHEST FARMERS IN SASKATCHEWAN, CENTRAL CANADA.

Arriving in Canada in 1891, just eighteen years ago, E. A. Guillomin could speak but his native language. He is a Frenchman. He had but a little over two dollars in his pocket, thus being short over seven dollars of the ten dollars required to secure entry for a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres. He eventually borrowed the money and near Forget, Saskatchewan, he started life in Canada on the homestead in which to-day he is the fortunate possessor of fifty quarter sections of land, or 8,000 acres.

Now Mr. Guillomin did not acquire all these acres as a result altogether of his farming operations, which were extensive. He looked with satisfaction upon what he was doing on his limited area, he was saving, careful, and had foresight. Surrounding land could be had for about $3.00 per acre, and he continued buying as his savings would permit, until now he has fifty quarter sections, some of which he can sell at $25.00 per acre.

Threshed Fifty Thousand Bushels.

This year he was engaged in threshing on his place for 54½ days. He threshed out 50,000 bushels of wheat, of which he sold 34,000 bushels, one train load, at a price varying from 84 to 87 cents per bushel. He has on hand still 16,000 bushels. In addition to wheat he raised 30,000 bushels of oats, 7,000 bushels of barley and 500 bushels of flax. He owns 104 horses and a number of cattle, but since the construction of the railway he has been engaged chiefly in raising wheat. This year he bought his first threshing machine, paying for it the sum of $2,100. He estimates that the machine earned for him this fall $3,000, thus paying for itself in one season and leaving $900 to the good. The weather was very propitious for farm threshing, not a single day being lost in the two months which were spent in this work. The wheat averaged 23 bushels to the acre and graded No. 1 and No. 2 Northern. In the past nine years seven good crops have been harvested on this farm. For six successive years the returns were excellent, that is in the years 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905 and 1906. In the two following years there was a partial failure. As the years have passed the quality of the buildings on the farm have been steadily improved, and are now as good as can be found in the district. About $10,000 has been invested in this way by Mr. Guillomin. The farm consists of 6,880 acres, of which about 6,000 acres were under crop this season.

San Joaquin Valley, California

A cow and an acre of alfalfa will earn $120 a year in the San Joaquin Valley.

Grapes will yield from $100 to $300 per acre; peaches and apricots, $150 to $500; while oranges will produce from $250 to $500, and in many instances more than $1000 an acre. There are ten million arable and irrigable acres here. You still may buy unimproved land for $50 an acre.

Ten acres are enough to comfortably support a small family. Twenty acres afford a fine living, with money in the bank. Forty acres should make you rich.

You pay from one-fourth to one-third down, balance easily can be paid for out of the crops.

Almost anything can be raised in the San Joaquin country—oranges and wheat, figs and apples, delicate grapes and hardy potatoes. Products of the temperate and semi-tropic zones flourish side by side.

Plenty of water for irrigation drawn from the near-by Sierra snows. It is easy for one to make a start. Land between the rows can be used, while orchard is young, for many profitable crops. The point is to make every square foot bear something.

What some farmers have done:

Frank Thomas, of Fresno, Cal., bought twenty acres of land five years ago. He had but $300 to start on. Today his place is paid for and he has an income of over $2,000 a year.

William Shrayer, R. F. D. 7, Fresno, Cal., bought his first ten acres six years ago. Now owns sixty acres all paid for, and refuses $12,000 for his place.

M. F. Tarpey, of Fresno, owns vineyard of 1,200 acres, from which he takes an annual profit of $125,000.

On the Harold estate, twenty-two acres of peaches yielded a $15,000 crop.

Carson Reed, Reedley, Cal., from a twenty-acre crop of Sultana raisins netted $3,200.

I know this valley from end to end. I have seen crops planted and harvested in every one of its counties. I have interviewed farmers, ranchers and merchants. I have collated the testimony of crop experts.

All this valuable information is contained in the San Joaquin Valley land folder issued by the Santa Fe Railway. Write for it, giving full name and address. I will also send you our immigration journal, The Earth, six months free.

The Santa Fe employs me to help settle up its Southwest lines. The Company has no land to sell, but I will gladly refer your inquiry to reliable land owners who have.
